The gameÂ .Q: How to loop through existing records In my model I have an existing code that I'd like to use that limits the number of times a user can create posts. If a user has 5 posts he/she can create another 5 before being prompted. I'm currently handling that with a self join, but I would like to be able to combine that with my existing code. If the user has 5 posts they should be able to post 10 (5 + 5). I'm having trouble figuring out the best way to handle this. So far I have a method that determines if the user has exceeded their limit or not. That works for if I'm going to create a new post. However, I don't want the user to be able to create a 10th post if they have already exceeded their limit, I want to hold off until the limit is reached. Here is my existing code: public function user_not_full() { $this->db->where('user_id', $this->user_id); $this->db->get('post', 5); $result = $this->db->count_all_results(); if ($result == 0) { return true; } else { return false; } } In Post I have the following code that tells if the number of posts is full or not: public function full() { $this
