Google Maps Plot Multiple Locations is a free utility to help you sketch location on Google Maps in a simple manner. It is an intuitive and simple to use program that allows you to draw multiple points on Google Maps using only a mouse. The program lets you draw a point on the map by clicking anywhere on the map, then you just have to move the mouse to the place where you want your point to be. Select one or more points with the help of a mouse and create an arc or a polygon around them with the help of the tool. You can save the map to the computer in a few different formats: you can save the map in a customized Google Map file. The map can also be saved in a PNG format. By selecting each option you want to use you can assign a custom size for the final file. To sketch a point you need only to click to start, and the drawing process will be done with the mouse click. This program does not feature any kind of editing tools. You cannot zoom, or change the scale of the map. In this regard, Google Maps Plot Multiple Locations is not very suitable if you are looking for a map editing program. Version 6: The program works great. I love the fact that you can draw a single point, arc, polygon or a polygon filled with points. The map is saved in five different formats. All of them save the map in a highly visible, editable form. In my opinion the only thing that could make it more excellent is the ability to save the map in a portable file. I love the fact that the Google map shows up on different computers running windows. I would like to thank you all for the continued updates to your programs. Final Thoughts: This program is designed to facilitate the users in drawing points and arcs on Google Maps. It allows them to draw multiple points and then make a selection to create one or many arcs around them. It has a simple and clean interface which can be easy to use by novice and experienced users alike. To create points on the map you only need to click the mouse and draw. You can also save your point location in the computer in a JPG file. Lying in the sun on the campus in University Heights one afternoon this summer, Cincinnati native Aaron Akins had his eye on the ball, but not the ball field. He was simply there to have a little fun, eat a few burgers, and maybe make some friends. Aaron's ultimate goal had just been realized, thanks to his studies. He had found his career. And his way into the workforce. He had been accepted into the Army's Officers Candidate School, and a few weeks prior, had a job interview with an investment company. But first he needed to pass the U.S. Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery Test or AFAST. "Without that, I'm not going anywhere," said Aaron, who is a skilled do-it-yourselfer. He's worked at Home Depot for two years, and believes that he may be a very good fit for the retail store. "I feel like there's a need for someone with my background. There's a lot of good workers out there, but not enough that have the skills that I do. So there's a need for someone like me, and an employer like Home Depot that recognizes that and hires me." Cuyahoga Community College's Summer Job Academy offers such valuable job prep skills to students like Aaron and his classmates who were selected to attend. This year's cohort consisted of teenagers and adults ranging in age from 16 to 71—and many of them wanted more than just a summer job. They wanted a career. "We know that many of our students have watched their parents' employment slip away over the past few years. Some have watched as their friends find something that they can do," said Tiffany Lott, Cuyahoga Community College's summer job academy coordinator. "We want to make them an offer that
